David Ross Sports Village

Our new state-of-the-art £40 million David Ross Sports Village will help take sport at Nottingham to the top.

It promises to be a fantastic new addition to University Park Campus providing all our sports teams and clubs with a great range of innovative new facilities in a lively and inclusive environment. While construction is underway temporary facilities will be available. Our vision for sport is bold and ambitious. The new development will help us increase participation in sports at all levels and provide the support people need to develop and excel, whether you're a casual player or an elite athlete.

All-new facilities and equipment

The new complex will incorporate parts of the existing sports centre, while adding an array of modern facilities, including:

- A 200-station fitness suite
- Glass squash courts
- Two 10-court sports halls
- An advanced Sports Performance Clinic
- Hypoxia chamber
- 60m indoor sprint track
- An anti-gravity treadmill and hydrotherapy pool
- A climbing wall
- Dance studios
- A snooker hall
- Plus a martial arts dojo

Investing in your sporting future

Dan Tilley, Director of Sport said: "The investment is part of our ambition to create an outstanding, inspirational and accessible sports infrastructure for all.

We want to encourage people of all abilities to get involved in sport and activity, with the chance to train alongside some of the country's leading athletes".

The new facility is being generously supported by Nottingham Law alumnus and Carphone Warehouse founder David Ross.

Can you help raise £3 million?

We're working to raise funds to make the most of this exciting new development, by providing facilities, coaching and scholarships.

Construction information

Construction of the new complex is due to start in March 2015 and completion is expected by late 2016.

To minimise disruption to current sports members, a temporary facility will be constructed in the area adjacent to the fitness centre and Nightingale hall prior to the closure of the existing sports centre.

More information about the construction plans and how this may affect you or your club will be released in due course, along with a detailed FAQ section and contact information for any queries you may have.
